BROOM CORN

There has been plenty of rain in the Lindsay district. One paper reporting 7.30 inches over a two days period. Weather reports vary from 3.42 inches at Pauls Valley to 6.32 at Chickasha. Lindsay lies about midway but has no weather bureau.

Under these adverse conditions, we were rather surprised to have information that an advance of from $25 to $30 per ton had taken place. A number of crop being sold for $200 per ton. This corn was in the sheds and not baled. It is reasonable to suppose with so much rain that some of it will be damaged. Evidently there must be some buyers who are rather anxious to get in the market.

There seems to be quite a difference of opinion as to what market prices should be. Those that have no broom corn think the price too high. On the other hand those that have some broom corn that they would like to turn at a profit, think the price is too low. The BULLS and the BEARS are putting up a good fight and it looks as though the BULLS have a little advantage.

In the meantime we are offering such corn as we have at prices that are less than the present western prices, plus commissions and freight. Think that the difference in price that you are able to save should be an inducement to buy.

BROOM HANDLES

Some weeks ago, at a meeting in Chicago, pending the completion of a code, the broom handle manufactures agreed on minimum sales prices, which were at an advance over the former prices that were being quoted.

As these advances were uniform, according to quality, the status of the Maple Handles that we have recommended has not changed. At the same time this change in prices has made it compulsory to advance the prices on these handles some.

At the same time we have not changed our former prices on either beech, fir or polished handles.

As these codes are completed and accepted, we feel that the manufacturing cost of handles will be raised considerably and look for higher prices from the mills at any time.

EXPERIENCE A TEACHER

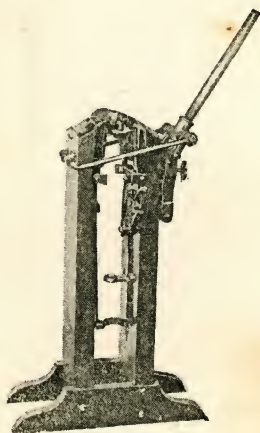

By considering the complaints of the workingman, and noting defects in other machinery, we have been able to obtain as near perfection in Broom machinery as possible.

Our machinery is made of the best material, best workmanship, and is bolted together so as to make the machines strong and durable.

Use of them will convince you of their superiority.

Our present winders have many more improvements on them than former ones.
